Heirs of Abraham

We live in a complex time, and each of us carries a confounding set of responsibilities: to care for our children, family and friends, to pay our taxes, to cover our expenses, to succeed at our work, to be a considerate neighbor, to maintain our physical health, to prepare for retirement issues, etc., all of which have to be attended to if we are going to be responsible members of society. It's only after we have all of life's obligations covered that we are no longer a burden on anyone else. Achieving this goal brings a strong sense of accomplishment and relief.

I imagine that the world would be a better place, if everyone were able to accomplish self-sufficiency. For no shortage of reasons, many people find this beyond their reach, and it's not because they're weak, lazy or unintelligent. Life isn't fair in distributing talent or opportunities. There are many who find themselves, in spite of Herculean efforts, in debt, threatened by violence, or taken advantage of by the unscrupulous. But let's just assume we are not among them. Let's pretend, for just a moment that we've achieved both autonomy and prosperity.

Can it be that when we've resolved our own affairs, we are done with our life's project? Is "not being a burden" our life's purpose? Could that possibly be enough?

In today's first reading, God says that he will make Abraham a great blessing: "I will bless you! I will make your name great, so that you will be a blessing" (Gen 12:2). I doubt that God intended that blessing to come to a halt with Abraham's death. In fact, I am convinced that we are all to pick up that mantle from his shoulders and bear it ourselves, becoming, in our own turn, blessings for others.

This would require us to:

- be a positive presence,
- respond with care to the suffering of others,
- look for ways in which we can ease others' burdens,
- enthusiastically celebrate the victories, big and small, of the people we encounter.

It's a way of life that mirrors Jesus' own. He accepted the responsibility of doing the good he was able to do, to teach, to heal, to comfort, and to restore life and wholeness. If we're going to be his followers, we have to do likewise.

It's easy to get overwhelmed by the size of the need out there. Please avoid taking responsibility to respond to everything. To be a blessing, it's sufficient to choose one important place to be of service, and then to jump in with dedication.

During this holy season, please don't restrict your Lenten observance to giving up some small thing. If you haven't chosen some way to be a blessing for others, I encourage you to consider how you might follow Jesus, as his disciple, in this way.

Siempre adelante!

Protect the Children

Safety Tips

The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children has created a tip sheet for parents and caring adults on how to keep children safer while they are at home, online or outside. Here are three examples:

- Instruct children to keep doors locked and not to open doors to talk to anyone when they are home alone.
- Teach children to never approach a vehicle, occupied or not, unless they are accompanied by a parent or other trusted adult.
- Use privacy settings on social networking sites to limit contact with unknown users.
